Barbara Healy to Speak on Rift Valley Children's Fund

Barbara Healy grew up in Thornwood, New York. Upon graduation from New York State University at New Paltz, she worked for NBC as a statistical analyst. She married in 1960 and moved to Charlotte, North Carolina, where her husband, Hugh, was employed by Formica Corporation. Over the next fifteen years Barbara and Hugh, along with their four children, moved from Charlotte to Memphis to Cleveland and finally to Laguna Beach, California, as Hugh was transferred within the company.

Once her children were grown, Barbara returned to work with an out-of-date English degree and no knowledge of then-current office technology. She started at an entry-level position, entering the work force as a file clerk for a temporary agency, or a Kelly Girl. Before long, she became an Administrative Coordinator for the City of Dana Point and remained in that position until she resigned to stay at home and care for her husband during his long and terminal illness.

Following his death, Barbara moved to Camden, Maine where she has become a volunteer working in her community. She spends much of her time devoted to issues of family, women and their children, and her church.

“Your manuscript is both good and original, but the part that is good is not original and the part that is original is not good.” Samuel Johnson, (attributed) English author, critic, & lexicographer (1709 – 1784)

Last year Barbara was asked if she would like to teach preschool and kindergarten classes at the Rift Valley Children's Village, a home for orphaned and severely abused children in Kiran, Tanzania.

Barbara returned to Africa again this year, leaving in late February. At that time she planned to once again teach preschool and kindergarten classes, but her main focus this time was to try to establish a fund that will provide money for food and medical care for the women and children in the small village in which she stays.
