Nature and Wildlife Photography

“Our most important goal is to use our photography as a connection for making people aware of the wonders of nature and the value of preserving it.”

Stoney and Jan Edwards began the art of photography through careers in electrical engineering and music. Stoney started with a box camera and dark room and progressed to a large format camera which led to participation in high school and college newspapers.

His lifetime career in the semiconductor industry enhanced his knowledge of the core technology which today makes up modern digital cameras.

Jan’s career as a pianist and teacher broadened her sense of form and composition as well as her understanding of color and shading.

Stoney and Jan use their photography to
